Piping and redirection is the means by which we may connect these streams between programs and files to direct data in interesting and useful ways. We'll demonstrate piping and redirection below with several examples but these mechanisms will work with every program on the command line, not just the ones we have used in the examples. Learn Piping and Redirection - Linux Tutorial As the pipe heats and cools it moves due to thermal expansion. Pipe flexibility and pipe supports must accommodate this movement. Pipe is attached to equipment, which has a limited capacity to support the pipe. As the pipe ages, it tries to find its lowest stress level, and thus it “relaxes” -
